I am greatly indebted to my supervisor, Prof. Gulab Jha Sir for the guidance, advice, support I received from him during the course of M. Phil. Programme. These aspects, being the fundamentals of any research work, received utmost efforts through his supervision; and this work would not have been possible without his dedication to guide me in the best way possible. His help and support were instrumental in the completion of this dissertation.

I convey my gratitude to Prof. Kandarpa Das Sir, Head of the Department of Foreign Languages for his unfailing encouragement. I also thank Dr, Rounak Mehtab Baruah Madam and Dr. Tandra Das Madam for their invaluable advice. Their orientation has been unprecedented in helping me undergo this research since the beginning.

I would like to thank the authorities of Krishna Kanta Handique Library, Gauhati University for their technical help and support. I also convey special thanks to my friend Siddharth for his continued encouragement and useful suggestions throughout the programme. Also, I express my thanks to my M. Phil batch-mates for their help and co-operation throughout.

Last, but not the least, I am thankful to my parents for believing in me and providing me the opportunity to pursue the M. Phil degree. Their utmost care, understanding and support in all the aspects of my academics deserve extreme gratefulness.
